Over nearly all scientific organisations, across every country and across time one finds that the progression of women in research/academia is significantly hindered when compared to men. Such a universal truth represents an enormous loss of talent, including in our very own scientific communities. This presentation discusses some of the evidence behind gender equality, and—most importantly—how that can be translated into day to day practice within an academic department.